New leadership practices: Scholarship, research and evidence

Educational leaders at the school and system level are key figures in the delivery of quality learning for young people.

The theme for this breakfast presentation will be on building capacity and leadership capability in the education sector in challenging times. Specifically it will focus on the critical importance of developing Educational Leaders who are trained to approach their role with a capacity to interrogate the evidence base so as to provide the best possible environment for students to realise their potential.

Speakers

- Mr Richard Bolt, Secretary for Education will open the breakfast.
- Professor John Loughran, Dean of Education, Monash will present on educational leadership.

Panel

- Professor Peter Sullivan,
- Associate Professor Len Cairns,
- Dr Jennifer Rennie,
- Dr Phil Riley
- Several graduates of the Master in School Leadership degree courses.

There will be discussion by the Panel on educational leadership, and the graduates will talk about their experiences and how these have influenced their leadership practices and careers. The Panel will then facilitate a Q&A session with the audience.
